Six tiny explorers discover the vast wilderness of a small back garden. Full of curiosity and mischief, the Buds tumble through mud, cross-sandpit deserts, climb bean-plant mountains, befriend snails, and marvel at the wonders of nature—where every leaf, bug, and raindrop is a thrilling new find.

A playful narrator helps the Buds to understand the world around them. Sometimes our little adventurers get it hilariously wrong, but that's part of the fun! Each episode introduces early nature concepts like habitats, plant life, insects, and weather—encouraging preschoolers to explore, be curious and find the extraordinary in the everyday.

In Tiny Wonders, our tiny animated explorers, the Nogglin, travel the world in their craft, the Noggle, seeking out the Tiny Wonders of nature to explore. Combining beautifully shot close-up macro footage of nature with animated characters voiced by children, each episode explores a different Tiny Wonder with a different Nogglin at its centre, whose personality helps shape the story.

Each story involves a Nogglin overcoming a difficulty through a mindful awareness of themselves and their surroundings, and in the process, learning a simple life lesson and something about the natural world.

Being ill is never pleasant and young children can often struggle to find a way to express their feelings about potentially uncomfortable topics. Get Well Soon eases children's fears about illness and going to see the doctor in a fun and informative way. Paediatrician Dr. Ranjit Singh helps to empower young viewers to understand their bodies and to see the medical world as a non-threatening and exciting environment, using music, laughter, games and five kid-relatable, puppet characters. Mixing live action and puppetry, the series covers the most common ailments from asthma to allergies and hiccups.

Straight A, super-nerds Lily, Martha and Jas are an inseparable trio, bound together by brains, loyalty and embarrassment. While other girls their age are going to parties, netball practice and sleepovers, they are busy with chess club, homework and Friday nights in watching documentaries. They just don't fit in with their peers and they don't want to.

They obsess over their grades, are baffled by teen trends and have absolutely no understanding of boys. While they might be the three smartest girls in the class, they've still got a lot to learn...

When a scientific experiment goes wrong and all the adults disappear, the children are left alone and clueless as to what has happened. Confusion soon turns into jubilation as they realise the whole world is now their playground. However, for one group, thrown together by circumstance, the situation is clearly fraught. Yes, it's fun now but without adults, sooner or later, the world as they know it will begin to break down. But where have the adults gone? Could the mysterious Sparticle Project provide any clues? Trying to fix the problem may just make things worse and they will have to face everything from surviving on their own to rival tribes and new dimensions.
